

Members of the marine expeditionary force climbing a ridge in mimic attack on the old Wilderness battle-field, the scene of terrific fighting in the Civil War.

International.

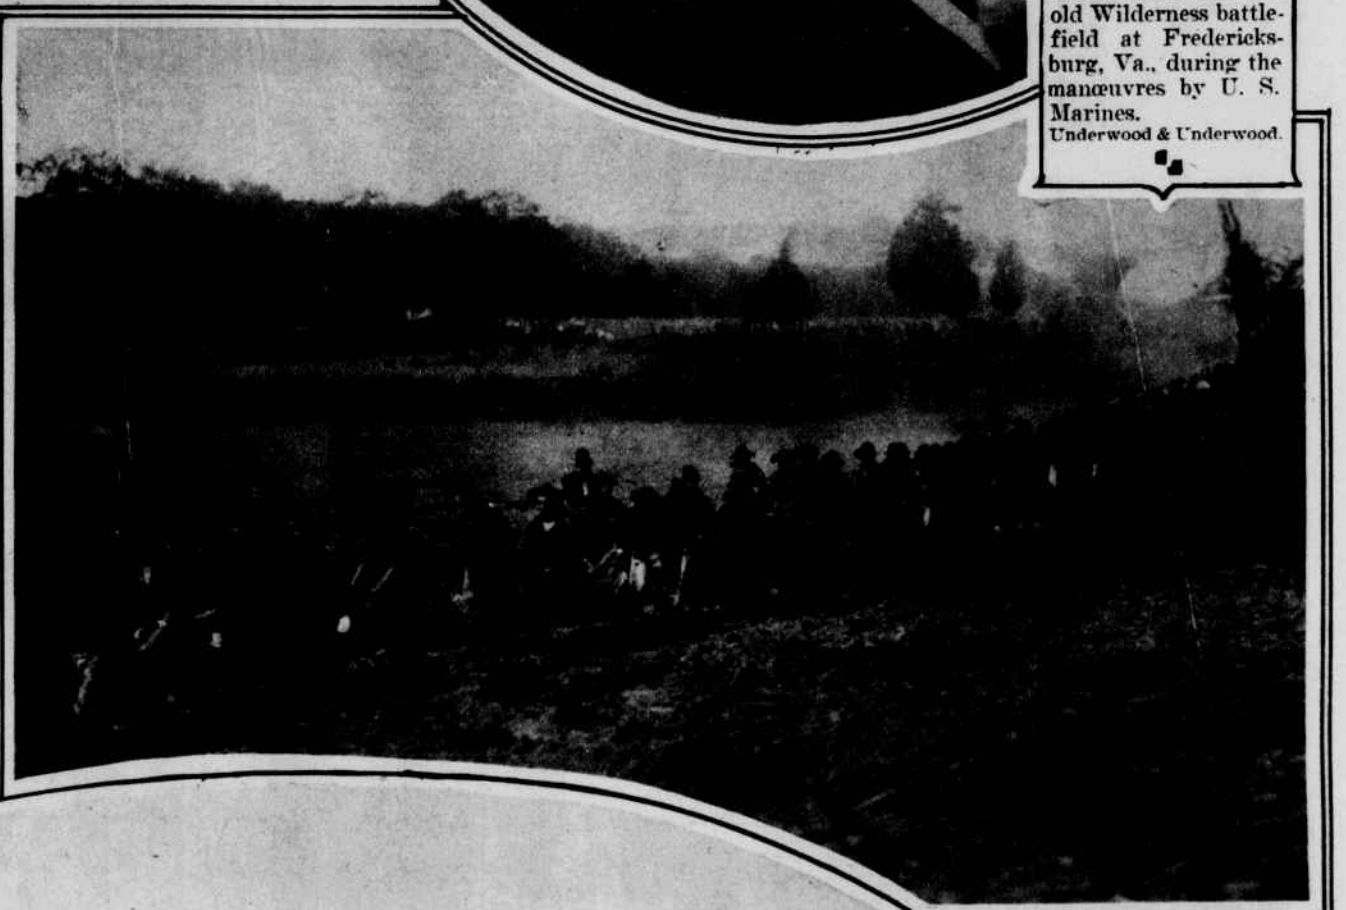

War balloon ready to soar aloft over the old Wilderness battle-field at Fredericksburg, Va., during the maneuvers by U. S. Marines.

Underwood & Underwood.

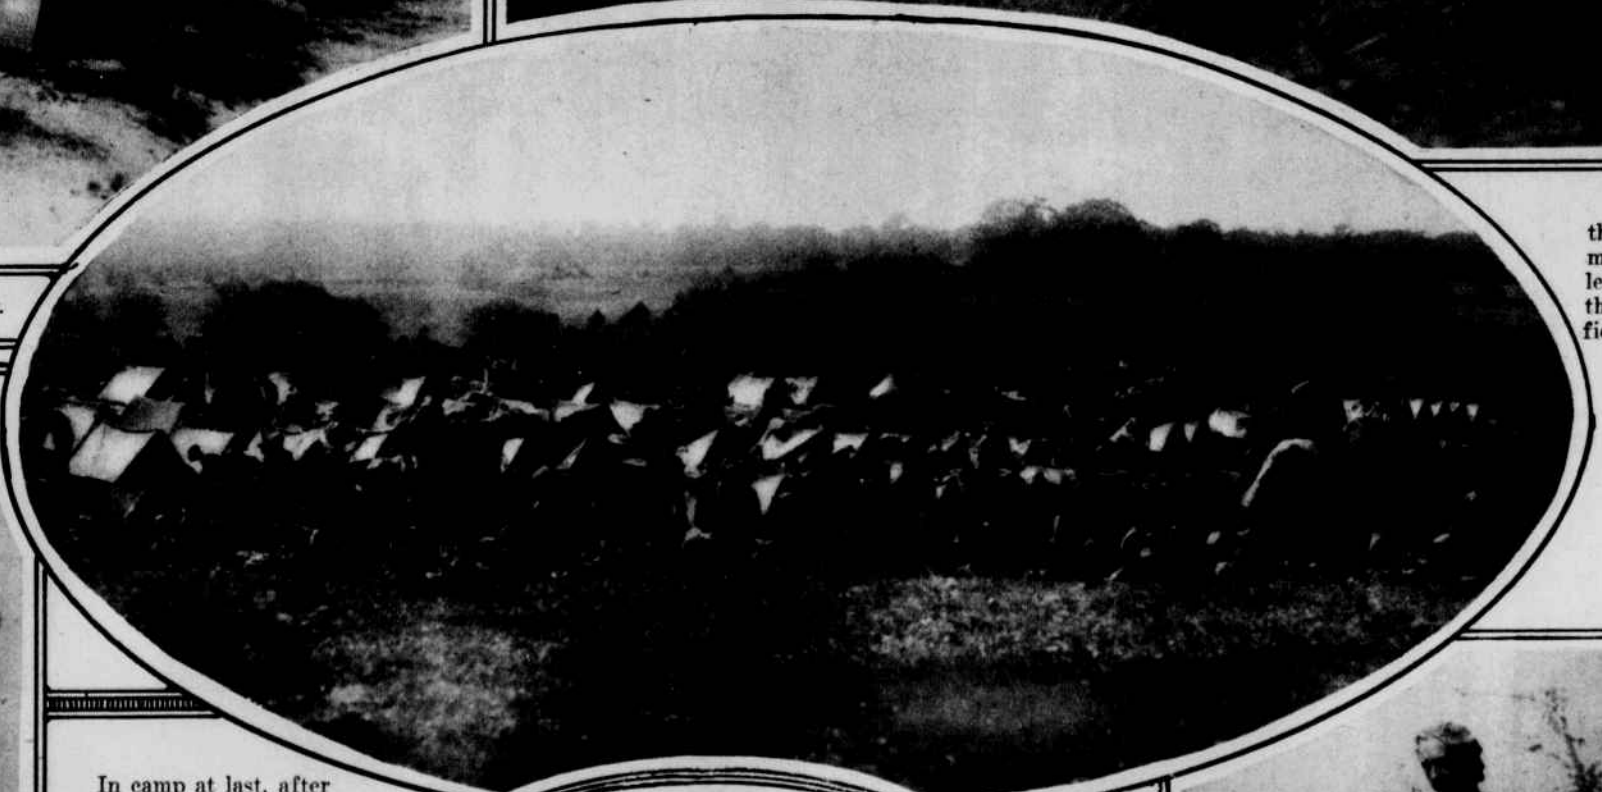

Major C. B. Vogel and staff resting along the road to Fredericksburg.

Above — Some of the 5,000 men, commanded by Gen. Butler, on their way to the Wilderness battle-field.

International.

In camp at last, after a twenty mile march over dusty roads to the scene of the mimic war on the old battle-field.

Underwood & Underwood.

Above—On Mount Temple, near Lake Louise in the Canadian Northwest, is this curious rock formation which has been named Polar Bear rock.

International

At Right—Mrs. Ashby of Leatherhead, Surrey, England, shod horses during the war because most blacksmiths were needed by the army. Now she has own forge and finds it profitable.

International.

Two interested spectators at the twenty-fifth annual Bryn Mawr Horse Show were Miss Anita Strawbridge (at left) and Miss Anne Ashton.

International.

The Booth statue in Gramercy Park, New York, was decorated recently by the great actor's admirers. The photograph shows Commander Giovanni Grasso, Italian actor-manager, placing a wreath on the pedestal.

Underwood & Underwood.